Own the Second Purchase

Lifting 90-day repeat from 24% to ~31%, inside the same $120M, with no discounts

Retargeting and lifecycle strategy, grounded in Adobe Customer Journey Analytics

Case Competition World Cup · Graduate Track · October 2026

Moving up to $9M to owned channels lifts repeat 24% → ~31%

Quince G27

Why now Viral growth built first buyers; CAC is up 29% to $62 and 90-day repeat sits at 24% against 30 to 35% at peers.

Capture every buyer

Passport card and app tracking in every box

Where the funnel breaks

People at each step (Fallout A1)

69% never add to cart; 77% of carts stall

Who comes back

Repeat rate in the CJA window

Engaged buyers self-select, so the plan assumes far less lift for buyers we newly capture (appendix 22)

24.5% of buyers engage, yet they are 66% of repeat buyers

When, and what next

Week-2 repeat (Cohort Table; directional, ~48/week)

Cashmere: touched by 40.7% of buyers, repeats least

Where the $120M goes

$31 retargeting CAC counts sales that would happen anyway; owned gets 5%, $1.43 per active customer

| Journeys and suppression | A quarter or two |
| Factory cost + opted-in buyers | Years |

amazon — Paid reach is an auction Quince can't win
Amazon ad business $19.8B a quarter, +26%

EVERLANE — Owned channels alone aren't a moat
Mature email and SMS, yet still sold

WILLIAMS-SONOMA, INC. — Trust must come from proof, not comparisons
Sued Amazon over "dupes"

→ Our moat is the combination: keep the factory-direct price, build the owned relationship rivals can't buy.
